

A Message from the President

It's an incredible honor to serve as the 80th President of the Iowa State Police Association. I'm truly humbled by the trust our members have placed in me and deeply aware of the responsibility that comes with this role. Our association represents not only the brave men and women who serve Iowa's communities every day, but also the values that define who we are—integrity, professionalism, and unity.

I want to start by thanking our outgoing president, Fred Lepley, and the executive board for their outstanding leadership and hard work. Their dedication has strengthened our association and advanced the well-being of our members. I also want to congratulate Bill Enockson from Local #7 Sioux City on his election to the board.

As we look ahead, I see an organization ready to build on that strong foundation. We're committed to supporting our officers, strengthening the trust between law enforcement and our communities, and making sure every member has the respect, resources, and recognition they deserve. The challenges we face are real—public safety demands keep changing, recruitment and retention are ongoing concerns, and our members continue to give so much of themselves in service to others. But I know we're ready to face these challenges together—with courage, teamwork, and a renewed sense of purpose.

As your President, my promise to you is simple: I'll listen. I'll advocate. And I'll work every day to make sure your voices are heard—at the State Capitol, in our communities, and anywhere decisions are made that affect our profession.

Together, we'll continue to honor the badge, support one another like family, and move forward with pride in who we are and what we stand for.

Thank you for your confidence, your service, and your continued partnership. I'm excited for what's ahead and honored to serve as your president.

Jason Feaker
